Apollo Enterprise Solutions Names John Gryga President of New Healthcare Subsidiary

Irvine, CA July 10, 2007 – Apollo Enterprise Solutions LLC, the leading provider of web-based payment and collection technology, announced today that it has named John Gryga President of the company's new healthcare subsidiary, Apollo Enterprise Healthcare Solutions, LLC ("AEHS"). A former GE Healthcare executive, Gryga will direct all business development at AEHS, including marketing, operations and customer service.

Prior to joining Apollo, Gryga served 20 years as an executive at GE Healthcare where he managed the sale and service of the company's leading-edge medical equipment. He has also served as Director of Operations at MaxMR Imaging where he was instrumental in increasing market share in all areas of the company's mobile and fixed site locations. As Director of Materials and Asset Management of RadNet Management, Gryga supervised the company's financial business operations and contributed to building that business into a national leader of high-quality, cost-effective diagnostic imaging services.

"John combines an exceptional knowledge of business, operations and sales with excellent management and leadership skills," said Apollo's Chief Executive Officer, Christopher Imrey. "He'll play a key role in bringing Apollo's highly effective payments and collections technology to the healthcare industry."

"I'm looking forward to working with Apollo's AEHS team," said Gryga. "Apollo's industry-leading, web-based Intelligent Debt Solutions™ system is very adaptable and will provide the medical industry state-of-the-art solutions for patients to self-cure their current or delinquent accounts at every stage of the revenue cycle management process. Expediting payments and collections will continue to be a growing challenge for healthcare providers and I'm certain Apollo will quickly capture a significant share of the market by delivering its 'Software as a Service' model that benefits all parties."
